FROM THE SECRETARIAT

Dear Friends,

Two recent events have cast the spotlight on the operation of Australia's Immigration policy. The removal of a family to Pakistan and the wrongful detention of an Australian resident in immigration detention have highlighted the human impact of the policies of forced deportation and of mandatory detention.

DEPORTATION

The deportation of the Bakhtiyari family in the early hours of Thursday 30th December ended their exhaustive struggle to secure refugee status in Australia.

At one o'clock in the morning, Roqia and her six children were awoken by immigration officials and taken under guard from residential detention in Port Augusta to the airport. The father, Ali, was transported from the Baxter immigration detention centre. Two hours later the reunited family was deported on a charter flight and later transferred to a commercial flight in Bangkok. Media, local residents and refugee advocates were present to witness the deportation in the middle of the night.

The Government maintains the Bakhtiyaris were from Pakistan, making their claim to be Afghani refugees invalid. The family was returned to Pakistan despite a last-ditch effort to find them a safer alternative in New Zealand. (<http://www.smh.com.au/news/Immigration/Bakhtiari-family-arrive-in-Pakistan/2005/01/03/1104601268147.html>)

As Hazaras, the Bakhtiyaris are at risk of persecution in Pakistan or Afghanistan. But Mr West, the Director of Centacare Adelaide who cared for the family for over a year, suggested they would probably leave Pakistan soon after their arrival. "It's only speculation at this stage, but I think they will want to get back to Afghanistan as quickly as they can... because if it's a choice between staying in Pakistan and going to Afghanistan, where at least they know the language and have friends and family, then Afghanistan is the safer option."

Days later, their arrival in Afghanistan was confirmed. (<http://www.cathnews.com/news/501/4.html>; <http://www.cathnews.com/news/501/100.html>)

On the day of their deportation, the Minister for Immigration, Senator Amanda Vanstone said the Bakhtiyari family had been given a fair go.

"From primary decision, through Refugee Review Tribunal hearings and 20 subsequent legal actions, the family's claims have been tested and re-tested. At the end, the conclusive finding was that the family was not owed protection and, consequently, the removal process is now being followed", the Senator said.

Days later, Senator Vanstone said the family would be billed for at least a third of total costs amounting to over $3 million for their detention and deportation. Failure to meet these costs would deny any future visas for the family. Described by West as "a cruel condition", this will make it virtually impossible for Church agencies and Catholic schools to sponsor the children so they can return to complete their education. (<http://www.cathnews.com.au/news/501/4.html>; <http://www.abc.net.au/news/newsitems/200501/s1275505.htm>)

The story of the Bakhtiyari family's five-year struggle was characterised by treacherous journeys to Australia, mandatory detention and an escape from Woomera, Family and High Court cases regarding the detention of children, the care of the children and later their mother and newborn in Adelaide by Centacare with the support of schools and the local community, the appeal to other countries to grant them asylum, and their forced deportation.

Their highly publicized ordeal has highlighted the treatment asylum seekers experience in the normal operation of Australia's immigration detention system. It also raises the same concerns explored at length in a recent study of Australia's treatment of rejected asylum seekers. "Deported to Danger" was undertaken by the Edmund Rice Centre for Justice & Community Education in cooperation with the School of Education, Australian Catholic University. (<http://www.erc.org.au/research/1096416029.shtml>)

Centacare Adelaide is raising donations to assist the Bakhtiyari family re-establish themselves in Afghanistan. If you would like to help, you can send cheques or money orders to "Centacare-Bakhtiyari Support Fund" at 33 Wakefield Street, Adelaide SA 5000.

DETENTION

Adding to the spotlight on immigration detention have been the revelations about an Australian resident's mistaken detention over a period of ten months. With inadequate psychiatric assessment and failures in state-based missing persons registers, Cornelia Rau was held by the Immigration Department as an illegal immigrant for six months in a Queensland jail and then four months in Baxter Detention Centre.

Following these revelations, the Australian Catholic Migrant and Refugee Office (ACMRO) and the Australian Catholic Social Justice Council (ACSJC) joined calls for the Government to ensure there is no repeat of this person's ordeal and to address the similar treatment of all people in detention. (<http://www.acbc.catholic.org.au/latest.html>)

The Federal Government has opted for a private investigation of the detention of Cornelia Rau. Others, including Ms Rau's family, have called for a public inquiry.

ACSJC Chairman, Bishop Christopher Saunders, said "Whatever the process of inquiry, the public will be looking for reforms ensuring no person will ever again fall through the cracks in the existing system.

"Inadequacies in state-based missing person notifications will be assessed and there may be calls for a national database. Undoubtedly, all levels of government will need to improve standards of psychiatric assessment and care in jails and detention centres.

"In addition to concerns about the unfortunate treatment of an Australian resident, this inquiry must consider the overall standard of care afforded to all people in detention. The treatment of Cornelia Rau is unacceptable. Logically then, we need to consider the treatment of others in immigration detention who are also vulnerable and deserving of care and dignity", he said.

Bishop Joseph Grech, Chairman of the Bishops' Committee for Migrants and Refugees, said "The Catholic Bishops of Australia have raised concerns on numerous occasions about conditions in immigration detention centres. We have stated our opposition to mandatory detention of asylum seekers, beyond the need for initial processing.

"Mental health is a significant issue in immigration detention centres. We call on the Australian Government to ensure that due consideration be given to the conditions endured by immigration detainees during the investigations that are now underway", he said.

Last year, the Australian Catholic Bishops expressed their concerns about the injurious nature of prolonged detention on many detainees who have already experienced great trauma in fleeing oppression and braving a dangerous journey to Australia.

Groups they identified as being particularly vulnerable to harm included children, unaccompanied minors, single women, those with a mental or physical disability, torture or trauma victims, and women in the late stages of pregnancy or nursing babies.

<http://www.acbc.catholic.org.au/bc/migref/2004051418.htm>)

Among other groups calling for a broader terms of reference for the current investigation, Amnesty International Australia is calling for the review of: how mandatory automatic detention of 'unlawful non-citizens' can result in wrongful detention; the broader mental health concerns of detainees in immigration detention; and all allegations of abuse of Cornelia Rau and other persons in immigration detention. The Amnesty 'rapid response' briefing and suggestions for action can be found at:

http://www.amnesty.org.au/whats_happening/refugees/actions/article?cid=20&pid=770

Last week, Senator Vanstone announced changes to Immigration Department procedures including a 28-day limit to the detention of suspected illegal immigrants in state correctional facilities; stronger procedures (including fingerprinting) to establish a person's identity with complex cases referred to Canberra for guidance where identity or status cannot be confirmed within the time-limit.

Opposition Immigration spokesperson, Laurie Ferguson is critical of the announced changes saying they are too late. He has called for an independent inspectorate to look at detention facilities and for independent medical access to people in detention. Greens Senator Kerry Nettle said there are far more significant issues concerning the health of detainees in corrections or immigration detention facilities. CURRENT ISSUES/RESOURCES

AUSTRALIAN HUMAN RIGHTS REGISTER

The Melbourne Catholic Commission for Justice, Development and Peace has released the annual Australian Human Rights Register. The Register is a NGO audit of Human rights. It records individual reports and accounts of developments and violations and analyses them in the light of the human rights conventions that Australia has ratified. It focuses on individual instances within Australia and contains reports from community legal centres, non-government organisations and the national media.

Each year the Register is used as a catalyst to draw attention to the state of human rights in Australia. To get your copy online, visit:

CARITAS AUSTRALIA – "PROJECT COMPASSION 2005"

In 2005, Project Compassion will focus on the millions of people around the world who are trapped by poverty. The goal of United Nations member states including Australia, is to halve poverty by 2015 through the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). The damage caused by the Boxing Day Tsunami has made the attainment of these goals even more urgent.

Time is running out and we all have a role to play. That is why in 2005, the theme for Project Compassion is "The Challenge is Poverty, the Time is Now!" For more info on Project Compassion, visit:

MARCH SOCIAL JUSTICE CALENDAR

DEATH PENALTY - MARCH 1 INTERNATIONAL DEATH PENALTY ABOLITION DAY: Today marks the anniversary of the date in 1847 when the US State of Michigan officially became the first English-speaking territory in the world to abolish capital punishment. The vast majority of executions worldwide are carried out in just a few countries. In 2002, 81 percent of all known executions took place in China (over 1,000), Iran (113) and the USA (71).

OSCAR ROMERO - MARCH 24 HOLY THURSDAY - 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF ASSASSINATION OF ARCHBISHOP OSCAR ROMERO: In 1977 Oscar Romero was appointed Archbishop of San Salvador, capital of El Salvador. An academic, he was not expected to challenge the ruling class, which owned 80 percent of the land and terrorised workers and landless peasants. Working with and for the poor changed him, enabling him to see the unjust structures operating in his country.

Romero was shot at the altar on March 24, 1980, as he celebrated Mass in the unfinished cathedral, which he had refused to complete as long as the poor of the city were poorly housed and were hungry. The previous day, he had made his prophetic call to the Salvadoran army to stop the repression, calling on soldiers not to obey unjust orders to kill their own sisters and brothers.

MARCH 25 GOOD FRIDAY: Jesus was executed by the State with two other criminals. As we commemorate the death of Jesus we are sadly aware that many nations still use the death penalty.
