FROM THE SECRETARIAT

Dear Friends,

As we enter the Season of Advent and look forward to Christmas, I would like to thank you for your kind support throughout the year and for your great commitment to the work for justice and peace.

As we reflect on the year that has past, may we be renewed with hope and confirmed in our faith that the love of God, made manifest in the person of Jesus Christ, has the power to transform our world.

To review the issues of war, violence and injustice that have emerged and been addressed in these Briefings throughout 2009 is a reminder of some of the great failings of humanity and the sufferings of the oppressed. We also see where transformation is needed and where encouragement can be found.

This year began with the awful tragedy unfolding in Gaza. Amid all the voices speaking at that time, I remember most vividly the voice of Fr Masallam, the Parish Priest of Gaza:

'The children of Gaza have been sleeping with their families in the hallways of their homes (if they have them)... They tremble with fear at every sound, every movement, and every violent F-16 attack. ... people's houses are severely affected by the violence, and it leads to the death of many children. Our children are suffering from trauma, anxiety, undernourishment, malnutrition, poverty, and lack of heating.'

Similarly haunting were the words of Fr Amalraj in June, capturing the horror of his parishioners along with the many thousands of other civilians caught up in fighting in the so-called 'safe-zones' in the north of Sri Lanka:

'There was heavy shelling from the army side. The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) shot people. The army were trying to capture us. The people were caught in between in the last moment for the LTTE and the crucial point in the battle, for the army. I cannot say which side was crueller... Within this two square kilometres there were more than 100,000 people, packed in and shells raining down.'

The fact that refugees and asylum seekers, escaping the horrors of situations like this, became the subject once more of a defensive political debate and sensationalised media coverage in Australia is a great shame. Decade-old terms such as 'illegals' and 'queue jumpers' resurfaced during the parliamentary debates of October and November. 1,800 arriving this year by boat, and Australia's small humanitarian intake pales into insignificance compared with the world's 42 million who uprooted by conflict and persecution. We Australians are entitled to feel ashamed that our political leaders used those old misleading arguments in the recent parliamentary debate. It was shameful.

On the domestic front we have argued strongly for a proper response to the needs of remote Indigenous communities that are currently subject to the Northern Territory Emergency Response. Since the inception of 'the Intervention' in 2007, the Australian Catholic Bishops Conference, the Australian Catholic Social Justice Council and the National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Catholic Council have called for support for these communities which is in accordance with the Racial Discrimination Act, and that moves beyond law-and-order to have a community development focus which is truly consultative and based on enduring partnerships between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Australians.

There have been many issues through the year that have been a source of encouragement in the work for justice and peace. These have included promulgation of the Holy Father's Encyclical Letter Caritas in Veritate, which challenged the growing gap between the poorest and the richest at this time of financial crisis. Issues addressed included insatiable consumerism, a crisis born of a morality that is not centered on humanity, and the search for a way of using earth's resources wisely and economically.

Remember also in May, in the light of the global financial crisis, Bishop Christopher Saunders issued the pastoral letter for the Feast of Saint Joseph the Worker, which called for increases to the minimum wage for the most vulnerable of the 'working families' our politicians portray as being a norm for the Australian workforce culture.

One highlight of the year was the Social Justice Sunday Statement, 'And You Will Be My Witnesses: Young people and justice'. Launching the Statement and referring to the particular justice issues that the Statement raises - Indigenous justice, workplace issues, mental health, protection from abuse, and other global issues such as environmental and development justice - Bishop Fisher said that 'the Bishops of Australia are more convinced than ever that our young people are empowered by the Holy Spirit, and ready, willing and able to take them on. 'They will be the bearers of the cross and ambassadors of faith, justice and hope, of charity in truth, in the decades ahead.'

There are so many other issues of social justice that we are all dealing with. Those listed above are only a few of the ones we have all tried to address.

Some of these challenges can seem insurmountable and without practical solutions. It is not uncommon to hear criticisms of strategies for justice and peace - that they are overly optimistic or won't work. Often, too, it can be that the loudest critics have little to offer in the way of alternatives that will bring hope to seemingly hopeless situations. In other areas we see small victories and the basis for progression and great optimism. And many examples of the small victories and hard work for justice have not been mentioned here.

In our shared work for justice, we might reflect on this following passage, Isaiah 9: 1, 3 - 7 which will be read at Midnight Mass this Christmas:

*The people that walked in darkness
has seen a great light;
on those who live in a land of deep shadow
a light has shone. ...
For the yoke that was weighing on him,
the bar across his shoulders,
the rod of his oppressor,
these you break as on the day of Midian.
For all the footgear of battle,
every cloak rolled in blood,
is burnt
and consumed by fire.
For there is a child born for us,
a son given to us
and dominion is laid on his shoulders;
and this is the name they give him:
Wonder-Counsellor, Mighty-God,
Eternal-Father, Prince-of-Peace.
Wide is his dominion
in a peace that has no end, for the throne of David and for his royal power, which he establishes and makes secure in justice and integrity.
From this time onward and for ever,
the jealous love of the Lord of hosts will do this.*

On behalf of the Australian Catholic Social Justice Council and its Secretariat I wish you and your loved ones a happy and holy Christmas and blessings for the New Year.

FAREWELL TO SR SUZETTE

Sr Suzette Clark rsc is leaving the ACSJC Secretariat after almost 11 years of service. In her capacity of Research and Projects Officer, Suzette has produced many resources and engaged in activities from discussion guides, liturgy notes and diaries, through to national consultations, public submissions, policy delegations and justice publications. This work has ranged from the Education and Formation to the Research and Advocacy elements of the ACSJC's work. Those aspects of the Council's work concerning networking can be seen in the many groups Suzette has belonged to and chaired and been a member. As members of this Council would attest, her legendary group-work skills have been invaluable in bringing clarity to diverse and complex issues. She will be very much missed by the members of the Secretariat.

'WILL THEY BE HEARD' REPORT

A group called 'Concerned Australians' has just released a report criticising the Government's consultations with Indigenous communities on the future of the Emergency Response. The Report is authored by Alastair Nicholson, Larissa Behrendt, Alison Vivian, Nicole Watson and Michele Harris. In the introduction, Alastair Nicholson says, 'After two years the Government has finally arrived at a really important amendment to the intervention legislation, namely the restoration of the relevant provisions of the Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth)... Normally, that would have been enough to dispose of most of the more offensive aspects of the intervention. However... the Government has embarked upon what it calls a process of consultation with the Aboriginal people in an attempt to gain support from the Aboriginal people for the preservation of particular features of the intervention that the Government thinks are good for them and to therefore designate them as 'special measures' that can be continued despite the reintroduction of the Act. As this Report shows, this is not consultation at all.' To download this important report, visit: <http://rollbacktheintervention.wordpress.com/>

NATIONAL CONGRESS OF AUSTRALIA'S FIRST PEOPLES

Tom Calma has announced that the new Indigenous representative organisation will be called the National Congress of Australia's First Peoples. Commissioner Calma, who has led the independent Indigenous Steering Committee since December last year, announced the name after the federal Government confirmed it had accepted the recommendations of the Committee's report, 'Our future in our hands', and had agreed to initial funding of the organisation until December 2013. The Steering Committee continues to focus on establishing the Ethics Council, appointing an interim National Executive to lead the organisation through the development phase, completing the preparatory work required to incorporate the company, and finalising arrangements for a Chief Executive Officer. EMPOWERING PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

3 December is the International Day of People with a Disability. This year's theme is 'Empowering people with disabilities and their families'. To coincide with this event, the Bishops Commission for Pastoral Life has prepared a bookmark, which will be distributed to parishes. 'We are called and challenged to take action to ensure our communities are open and active in promoting opportunities that include people with a disability,' he said. Contact: 02 6201 9859, 0408 561 255 or disability@catholic.org.au. Web: <http://www.catholic.org.au/>.

'SOMETHING FOR NOTHING - UNPAID OVERTIME IN AUSTRALIA'

The Australia Institute has just released a policy paper which shows that Australian workers are 'donating' more than their annual leave entitlement back to their employers in the form of unpaid overtime. The typical full-time employee is working 70 minutes of unpaid overtime a day, which equates to 33 eight-hour days per year, or six and a half standard working weeks. The paper by Josh Fear and Richard Denniss examines the nature, extent and consequences of Australia's heavy reliance on unpaid overtime. Across the workforce, the 2.14 billion hours of unpaid overtime worked per year is a $72 billion gift to employers, equivalent to 6% of all economic activity in Australia or 1.16 million full-time jobs. To download the paper, visit: <https://www.tai.org.au/?q=node/49>

COMMUNITIES IN CRISIS APPEAL

With the spread of Typhoon Ketsana across the Asia Pacific severely affecting the Philippines, Vietnam and Cambodia; a tsunami in the Pacific devastating communities in Samoa and Tonga; massive flooding in India; landslides in Nepal; and the earthquake in Indonesia centering on Padang in Sumatra, people across our region are in desperate need. You can help these people in our neighbourhood by giving to the Caritas Australia 'Communities in Crisis – Asia Pacific Appeal', Donate online at <https://www.caritas.org.au> or phone 1800 024 413 (tollfree).
